

FALL VIRTUAL SYMPOSIUM PARTNERSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

Built on Integrity: Advancing Ethics, Promoting Transparency, and Navigating Bias across Scholarly Publishing.

In today's rapidly evolving publishing landscape, "integrity" is no longer a static ideal—it's a dynamic responsibility. This conference explores the many meanings of integrity in scholarly communication, from upholding ethics and minimizing bias to ensuring editorial independence, scientific rigor, and equitable participation. Sessions will examine evolving strategies for:

- managing research misconduct
- the impact of artificial intelligence and automation, and
- the structural pressures facing journals, editors, societies, and publishers.

Join a global community of stakeholders to confront challenges and co-create a more trustworthy and resilient future for scholarly publishing!

ATTENDANCE: 200-250 – The Virtual Fall Symposium offers two days of in-depth explorations from key opinion leaders of critical and timely topics in our field, combining hands-on learning with a chance to interact with your scholarly publishing friends and colleagues.

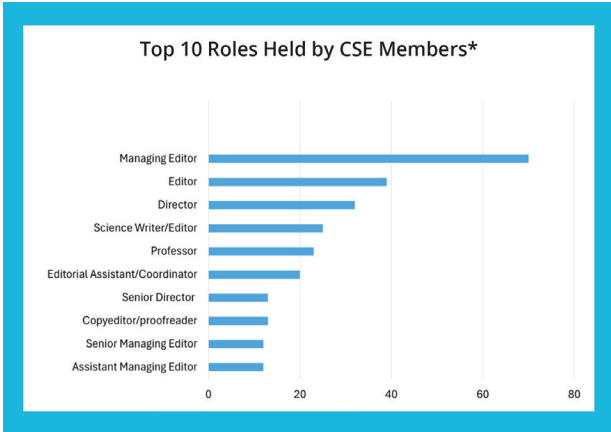

Fall 2025 Symposium Sessions and events include:

- Addressing Bias in Publishing
- Editorial Integrity Under Pressure: Navigating Leadership, Independence, and Influence
- From Blah to Brilliant: Resume Refresh
- Editorial Integrity in Practice: How Editorial Offices Navigate and Shape Ethics in Publishing
- The Structural Integrity of Scholarly Publishing: Future Shifts and Disruptions

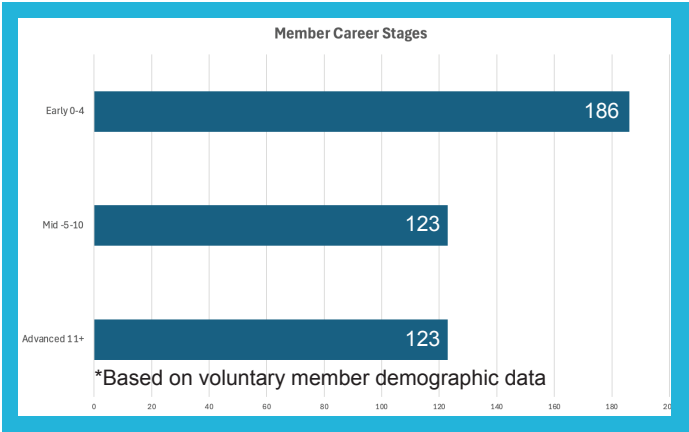

WHO IS CSE?

The Council of Science Editors (CSE) is an international membership organization for editorial professionals who work on publications in the physical and life sciences, as well as the humanities. Our purpose is to serve our more than 700 members in the scientific publishing, information science and scientific communities by fostering networking, education, discussion, and exchange.
